Davos, Switzerland, 18 January 2013 – The World Economic Forum 's Open Forum Davos series of public debates, held in Davos, Switzerland, between 23 and 26 January 2013, enters its 11th year of offering the public high-quality panellists and a rich range of subjects.

Upholding its tradition of embracing a controversial and eclectic range of issues, the 2013 Open Forum will comprise seven debates on matters of local, national and international interest. As in previous Open Forums, each session has been designed to bring out the widest range of voices, the most compelling ideas and maximum interaction with the audience.

Some of the leading personalities who will participate in the Open Forum are:

- Paul Bulcke, Chief Executive Officer, Nestlé, Switzerland
- Sharan Burrow, General Secretary, International Trade Union Confederation (ITUC), Brussels
- Kris Gopalakrishnan, Executive Co-Chairman, Infosys, India
- Vittorio Grilli, Minister of Economy and Finance of Italy
- Ueli Maurer, President of the Swiss Confederation and Federal Councillor of Defence, Civil Protection and Sports of the Swiss Confederation
- Robin Niblett, Director, Chatham House, United Kingdom
- Fredrik Reinfeldt, Prime Minister of Sweden
- Guy Ryder, Director-General, International Labour Organization (ILO), Geneva
- Guido Westerwelle, Federal Minister of Foreign Affairs of Germany

The following topics will be discussed at the Open Forum:
