- Young Global Leaders engage in task forces that address specific challenges of public interest with the objective of shaping a better future

Geneva, Switzerland – The World Economic Forum has announced its Young Global Leaders (YGLs) for 2011. The honour, bestowed each year by the Forum, recognizes and acknowledges up to 200 outstanding young leaders from around the world for their professional accomplishments, commitment to society and potential to contribute to shaping the future of the world.

For 2011, the Forum has selected 190 Young Global Leaders from 65 countries and all stakeholders of society (business, civil society, social entrepreneurs, politics and government, arts and culture, and opinion and media). The new class represents all regions: East Asia (50), South Asia (18), Europe (42), Middle East and North Africa (13), sub-Saharan Africa (14), North America (37) and Latin America (16). This year's selection has more gender parity than ever, with 44% women.

"The challenges faced by the next generation of leaders are more daunting and intractable than ever and cannot be mastered with the current set of strategies, institutions, standards and attitudes. To address these challenges in a meaningful and sustainable way requires fresh thinking, multistakeholder engagement and dynamic new ways of collaborating to develop innovative solutions that are truly global. Recognizing this need, in 2004, I created the foremost platform for young leaders to engage in global affairs to shape a more positive, peaceful and prosperous society. Within the World Economic Forum community, the Young Global Leaders represent the voice for the future and the hopes of the next generation. I am particularly proud of this year's honourees who make up the most diverse class of YGLs ever," said Klaus Schwab, Founder and Executive Chairman of the World Economic Forum.

Drawn from a pool of almost 5,000 candidates, the Young Global Leaders 2011 were chosen by a selection committee, chaired by H.M. Queen Rania Al Abdullah of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan.

The Young Global Leaders 2011 reflect different kinds of leadership in different parts of the world and different parts of society. The ones from the South Asia region include, among others, Fawad Ahmad Muslim, President and Chief Executive Director, Jahaan Technology Corporation (from Afghanistan); Abdul Wunem Wasif, Photographer (from Bangladesh); Anuradha Acharya, Founder and Chief Executive Officer, Ocimum Biosolutions Ltd (from India); Gita Gopinath, Professor of Economics, Harvard University (from India); Chetan Maini, Deputy Chairman and Chief Technology Officer, Mahindra Reva (from India); Meenakshi Natarajan, Member of Parliament, India (from India); Saleem Ali, Professor of Environmental Planning and Asian Studies, Rubenstein School of Environment and Natural Resources, University of Vermont (from Pakistan); and Mir Ibrahim Rahman, Chief Executive Officer, GEO TV Network (from Pakistan).

Dawood Azami, Bureau Chief, BBC World Service, a recently selected YGL from Afghanistan reflects on his selection, "Life is a struggle and to be able to bring a positive change is very rewarding and a fulfilling thought. The YGL Forum is one the best and effective platforms where ideas are shared, skills are refined and developed, and an action plan is made to bring change and make the world a better place. I am very glad to be part of such a forum which strives to find the right solutions to the problems faced by the world today and positively impact the global agenda. I believe in a positive change, doesn't matter how small that be. I am reminded of a saying that if one leaf changes its colour, it means the tree is not the same anymore. I am sure the state of the world will be improved as a result of the sincere efforts of the YGL forum."

The 2011 honourees will become part of the broader Forum of Young Global Leaders community that currently comprises 668 outstanding individuals. The YGLs convene at an annual summit which this year will be held in Dalian, People's Republic of China, on 12-16 September 2011. Young Global Leaders are actively engaged in the community, integrating into events organized by the World Economic Forum, holding events of their own as well as launching and leading a number of innovative initiatives and impactful task forces. See www.redesignourworld.com for the latest list of YGL initiatives. These activities enable YGLs to learn from each other, and with each other, to build knowledge and engender a better understanding of global challenges and trends, risks and opportunities, as well as to further enhance their unique role as leaders within their own organizations, the World Economic Forum and the broader global community.

Reflecting on his experience as a YGL, Sandeep Naik, Co-Head, Apax Partners India Advisers, says, "The YGL community is made up of an action-oriented, enthusiastic, passionate group of people who are keen to make a difference in improving the state of the world. The YGL platform, with its tremendous potential, has helped me reach out to these individuals and work on key social initiatives that matter the most. I feel fortunate to be a part of this community that has so much to give."

"We are very pleased to welcome the new cohort of Young Global Leaders into our community and encourage them to embrace the opportunity fully. The YGL community helps its members make the transition (as one YGL told me) 'from success to significance' and strives to move from a collection of successful individuals to a community of collective impact. YGLs hold each other accountable to a higher standard of global leadership in their professional and personal lives, so it really is about making the world a better place, one leader at a time," said David Aikman, Head of The Forum of Young Global Leaders.
